MEETING OF RURAL SOCIOLOGISTS

2:30 P.M. TUESDAY, DECEMBER 27

At the last meeting of the American Sociological Society a group of rural sociologists got together and, after consulting the Executive Committee of that society, voted to hold a special session in connection with the next meeting for a consideration of the special problems of rural sociology. Dr. K. L. Butterfield was chosen as chairman of this informal group and the following committee was named by him to assist in arranging a program: Professor W. J. Campbell, Y.M.C.A. College, Springfield, Mass.; Professor Everett Dix, Berea College, Berea, Ky.; Rev. John O'Grady, Washington, D.C.; and the undersigned. Upon the eve of his sailing for China, Dr. Butterfield requested me to act for him with this committee. Therefore, after consulting with them, the following arrangements have been made. As it was impracticable to secure a separate session during the meeting of the Sociological Society, a meeting on Tuesday afternoon before the first session of the Society in the evening, will be held at the Fort Pitt Hotel at 2:30 P.M. This will consist of a Round Table Discussion of the topic—"The Rural Community and the Rural Neighborhood as Social Units." Dr. C. J. Galpin will preside and the discussion will be led by Dr. C. C. Taylor, North Carolina A. and M. College, Professor J. H. Kolb, University of Wisconsin, and the writer. It is proposed to hold a subscription dinner immediately following the program, for the purpose of better acquaintance among the group. Since arrangements must be made in advance all who expect to attend are requested to drop a card to the undersigned at once.
